Remember when Chace Crawford told you to give him your pants? That was as part of a project (Teens for Jeans) run by the very cool DoSomething.org, which aims to make it super easy for you guys to get involved with charities—and, if you so choose, start your own! They run the Do Something Awards which honor "young world changers" and gives each of them $10,000 in grants and scholarships to pursue their projects. Awesome, right? Check out the cool girls (and guys—some of whom are total hotties) who are finalists for this year's award and get inspired! Rachel Nalebuff Kauder, who compiled the book of first period stories, is up for the award. As is Shauna Lynn Fleming, who started a project where you can text U.S. soldiers who are at war. And Maggie Doyne who built a school\(!\) for kids and orphans in war-ravaged Nepal. Are you totally inspired yet? Get started and maybe you can be one of next year's winners!
